Oklahoma City University Offers Religious Studies Program

OKLAHOMA CITY--Oklahoma City University is offering a Religious Studies Program through the Wimberly School of Religion and Graduate Theological Center and the Church Leadership Center.

The program is for anyone desiring a formal religious study opportunity without pursuing a degree program. Continuing education credit is available upon the completion of each course.

Participants enroll in regular university courses as special students for $75 per course. Full participation, including class attendance and reading, is expected; however, participants are not required to take tests.

The courses offered through the program this fall are Introduction to Biblical Literature; Biblical Hebrew I; Modern Jewish Thought; Religion in American History; History of Religions; History of Christian Thought; Gospels and Acts; Nature and Work of Christian Education; Ministry to Youth; Vocation, Work and Ministry (seminar); Formative Ideas in American Religious Consciousness; Rites and Rituals in the Faith Pilgrimage; Modern Trends in the World's Religions and Tillich's Systematic Theology (seminar).

The deadline for registration is Aug. 15. Classes begin Aug. 20. The number in each class is limited. For more information, contact Dean Don Emler with the Wimberly School of Religion at (405) 521-5284 or John Rusco with the Church Leadership Center at (405) 521-5011.
